

Military Family Ministries Testimony

When Warren Johnson went to change the light bulb at the home of the Moseley's, he didn't realize how much his light would shine for this family. It has truly been a blessing to the military family with four children and a parent deployed. The Johnson's and the Moseley's have been close friends for almost two years since that day.

"We have gotten very involved with them, celebrating birthdays together, attending soccer games, spending Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter with them. We go to school "concerts", and I have baked cupcakes for classes. What a joy! Michelle and I have a lot in common with sewing and love of cooking. I have made the girls dresses, and Halloween costumes, and have babysat so the Moseley's could get away. It has been a wonderful relationship that has developed. We were never more proud than to go to March AFB when Jaime came home from his last deployment in Iraq to welcome him home," says Patti Johnson. Jaime calls Warren with electrical or plumbing questions, and he has helped with numerous household repairs during the last year and a half.

"They call us their 'family', and we feel the same. We are truly blessed. I wish you could see all the drawings and cards the children have given us over the year. When they come over, it feels just like the grandchildren have arrived. They call me Patti Cakes, and my husband, Mr. Warren," says Patti. When Jamie's sudden orders for deployment were announced, the Johnson's knew they had to jump in and help with the preparations. Patti said, "We feel this is the least we can do for our young Marine and his family. They are as much a blessing to us as we are to them."
